SHEPHERD TALK

I Am a Tool

A popular Bible verse that I see on T-Shirts, wall artwork, facebook profiles, and many other public places is Philippians 4:13: "For I can do everything through Christ, who gives me strength."

I like that verse. I especially like it in context with the words Paul writes before and after. He was more concerned with how God could use him than he was with how God would take care of him. As long as God's Good News was being spread, Paul was content.

I recently changed jobs. I was not looking for a new job, but the new job found me. It's closer to home and it pays more money, so it seemed like an obvious decision. When I accepted the new position, I was glad that God was giving me a little more money, a little more time, and an exciting new opportunity to advance in my career. "I can do everything", indeed. I did what I always do. I focused on me. I was wrong. I was very wrong.

I now see that God needs me to be his tool, not a Tool like I was in the above paragraph. What I saw as a reward was just the Giver providing what was needed. When he sees a need he fills it, even before we see the need. I can be content in whatever condition God wants me to be. And where he puts me is always better than where I plan to put myself. The blessing of my current circumstance is that I get to be God's tool. And the rewards I get daily are better than anything I could have imagined for myself.
